War & Ukraine's democracy

- Recognized as “partly free” by the Freedom House 2023 “Nations in Transit” report
- Numerous restrictions, stemming from the Martial Law:
 - Prohibition of elections at all levels until the end of the martial law period
 - Wartime media regulations: launch of the telemarathon
 - Suspension of the activities of ten political parties, linked to the aggressor state
 - Restrictions on citizens' rights, e.g. freedom of movement
- Instances of misuse by the government
 - E.g. exclusion of opposition channels ‘Espresso’ and ‘Pryamiy’ from digital broadcasting network
 - No restoration of access, despite the 25.000 citizens' signing the petition
 - Limitations on contacts with foreign partners, imposed on opposition MPs, delays with approval of business trips

Good news (1): Pluralism Despite Martial Law

- Onuch, O. & Way, L. (2024, May) Why Ukraine's Elections Can Wait. Journal of Democracy.
 - Reactionary society and the government's most often staying attuned to societal moods (e.g. 4.200 amendments to the Mobilization Law)
 - Debate (!!!)
 - No real wartime censorship (social media as the key source of information)
 - Continuously strong role of municipalities / emergence of collaborative governance practices
 - Active civil society / volunteering movements
 - EU + other Western actors as watchdogs of Ukraine's democracy

Good news (2): Collapse of Ukrainian oligarchy

- Siedin, O. (2024, March 14). The Collapse of Ukrainian Oligarchy in Ten Years of War.

Focus Ukraine

- 2011-2021 – assets of key Ukrainian oligarchs already halved
- Key influence factors:
 - War and destruction
 - Salience of IT and agriculture, rather than industrial sectors
 - Anti-oligarchic legislation
 - Anti-corruption and anti-money-laundering legislation, more generally

Threats amidst the war, capable of influencing the post-war period

Source: GANK

- Further consolidation of the power vertical
- Societal polarization, coupled with radicalization:
 - Those who remained / those who left
 - Those who served in the army / those who did not
 - Those who experienced losses due to the war / those who did not
- ‘Economic reservation’ debate
- Reinvigoration of the language-related debate (killing of language activist Farion)

End-of-the-war related threats to democratic development

- Legitimacy of the peace negotiations' outcome
(especially in case of territorial 'concessions')
- If needed: challenge of reintegrating previously occupied territories (due to changed demographics)
- Striking a balance between collaborators and people at occupied territories, forced to abide by the occupation power

Way ahead

- Nationwide dialogue on the war, negotiations and post-war Ukraine / memory policy work
- Provision of assistance to vulnerable groups, especially veterans and IDPs
- Work with international partners to ensure Russia's accountability for its crimes against Ukraine
- Collaboration with international partners aimed at strengthening the capacity of local self-government bodies and civil society
